

"My guest succeeded in getting white and opened with pawn to king's bishop four, apparently choosing the opening known as Byrd's(sic) so much favoured by Alekhine and the Russian masters. I will make it a shilling."

"One and sixpence" said Shorty quickly.

"I will see one and sixpence" said the Good Fairy.

"I replied with a simple pawn to king's three, a good temporizing move until my opponent disclosed the line he was to follow. The move has received high praise from more than one competent authority. (Don't think so. -Ed.) I will also see Mr Andrews for the sum of one and sixpence."

- Flann O'Brien: "At Swim-Two-Birds"
